THE FORMULA

BALANCE OXIDATION. THE BODY'S PRIMARY AGENT.

A tripeptide of glutamic acid, cysteine, and glycine, found in plants and animals and present in every cell. A lack of glutathione contributes to oxidative stress, a major player in aging.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 01 | TRIPEPTIDE | Glutamic acid, cysteine, and glycine. Present in every cell. |
| 02 | GSH AND GSSG | Reduced (GSH) and oxidized (GSSG). A higher GSSG to GSH ratio means more oxidative stress. |
| 03 | ALSO IN IT | Vitamin B3 and inositol, with reduced glutathione. |

MAY HELP

Reduced glutathione

- May help support cognitive function*
- May help support skin health*
- May help support immune system function*
- May help promote balanced oxidation levels*
- May help promote cellular function*

Demand can outrun the body's production. Supplementation is associated with higher glutathione and lower oxidative stress. Oxidative stress can affect cognitive, cellular, and immune function, and can show up in skin as wrinkles. Through that relationship, reduced glutathione supports cognitive function, skin health, and vitality.
